As Russia's invasion of Ukraine had its third anniversary, US President Trump has once again taken office in 2025, claiming that he can secure a peace deal between Russia and Ukraine. During this time, the geopolitical linkages between the Euro-Atlantic and Indo-Pacific regions have become increasingly evident. How can both sides of Eurasia cooperate? Both regions face new security threats, such as cybersecurity, FIMI, gray zone situations, and dispatch and sabotage on undersea infrastructure, which require immediate responses as well. How can we leverage each other's experiences to address these challenges in our respective regions?
